BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE SWEET SINGER OF THE DUSK

JOLLY, round, red Mr. Sun was just going to bed behind the Purple Hills, and the Black Shadows had begun to creep all through the Green Forest and out across the Green Meadows. It was the hour of the day Peter Rabbit loved best. He sat on the edge of the Green Forest watching for the first little star to twinkle high up in the sky. Peter felt at peace with all the Great World, for it was the hour of peace, the hour of rest for those who had been busy all through the shining day. Most of Peter's feathered friends had settled themselves for the coming night, the worries and cares over and forgotten. All the Great World seemed hushed.

In the distance Sweetvoice the Vesper Sparrow was pouring out his evening song, for it was the hour when he dearly loved to sing. Far back in the Green Forest Whip-poor-will was calling as if his very life depended on the number of times he could say "Whip-poor-will" without taking a breath. From overhead now and then came the sharp, rather harsh cry of Boomer the Nighthawk as he hunted his supper in the air.

For a time it seemed as if these were the only feathered friends still awake, and Peter couldn't help thinking that those who went so early to bed missed the most beautiful hour in the whole day. Then, from a tree just back of him, there poured forth a song so clear, so sweet, so wonderfully suited to that peaceful hour that Peter held his breath until it was finished. He knew that singer and loved him. It was Melody the Wood Thrush.

Peter hopped over to the tree from which the song came. It was still light enough for him to see the sweet singer. He sat on a branch near the top, his head thrown back and his soft, full throat throbbing with the flute-like notes he was pouring forth. He was a little smaller than Welcome Robin. His coat was a beautiful reddish-brown, not quite so bright as that of Brownie the Thrasher. Beneath he was white with large, round, black spots thickly dotting his breast and sides. He was singing it as if he were trying to put into those beautiful notes all the joy of life. Listening to it, Peter felt steal over him a wonderful feeling of peace and pure happiness. Not for the world would he ever have interrupted it.

The Black Shadows crept far across the Green Meadows, and it became so dusky in the Green Forest that Peter could barely make out the sweet singer above his head. Still Melody sang on and the hush of eventide grew deeper as if all the Great World were holding its breath to listen. Peter felt sure that somewhere near was a nest, and that one thing which made that song so beautiful was the love Melody was trying to express to the little mate sitting on the eggs that nest must contain.

QUESTION BOX By ED WYNN... The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I wrote you some time ago to help me solve a "Cross-Word Puzzle." I asked you for a twelve-letter word meaning "Letter Carrier," and you said "Postman." The word "Postman" only has seven letters. Where are the other five letters?

Truly yours, WILDFER WORD.

Answer: The other five letters are in the postman's bag.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have always heard that living in the country is much healthier than living in the city. If this is true, why is the air so much purer in the country?

Yours truly, C. D. SOIL.

Answer: The reason the air is so pure in the country is because the farmers keep their windows closed.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I read some statistics compiled by the prohibition authorities and they claim that "whisky" kills more people than "bullets." Is this true?

Yours truly, JOHNNY WALKER.

Answer: Yes. But that is merely because people prefer to be full of "Whisky" than full of "Bullets."

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have never traveled before, so am seeking some information. I understand that in every city there are two kinds of hotels—American and European. I know what is meant by an American hotel, but what is an European hotel?

Sincerely, I. WILL TOUR.

Answer: You can tell a European hotel very easily. Fighting on every floor.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am a minister of a church and notice my congregation on Sunday is composed mostly of women. What do you suggest to help me get the men?

Yours truly, I. PREACH.

Answer: Put a putting green in the rear of the church and reserve the last two rows for smoking.

The Little Brown Schoolhouse

By ANNE CAMPBELL

AROUND those brown walls my affections entwined.

Although they are standing no more. In my memory lingers its simple design.

The windows, the thick, oaken door. The little square panes have admitted the light

Of many a long day for me. As I studied the "Three Rs" at home every night,

The face of my teacher I'd see.

The desks were initialed with names that were cut

On many a tall granite shaft. The blackboards have vanished where I used to put Gay pictures while naughty boys laughed.

Remember the globe that revolved on the shelf?

The books that were pencilled and worn?

The dunce with his tall cap, who stood by himself,

The victim of scholarly scorn?

We girls wore bright aprons of gingham and print,

And when we got home every night Our mothers would say: "Now you must do your stint."

For our samplers were mother's delight.

The boys did the chores after school, and arose

With the first faint approach of the sun

To help in the barn . . . On their nimble bare toes

They scurried till all tasks were done.

The little brown schoolhouse! What memories rise

Of days that will not come again! Of orchard and garden and clear sunny skies,

Broad meadows and green, winding lane.

The school bell will ring in September to call

Our children to lessons once more, But never again will our own shadows fall

The length of the old schoolhouse floor.

TRUE HUMOR NOT OFTEN ACHIEVED BY FORCED WIT

The one great quality that a humorist must have is an insight into human nature. Some, like Mark Twain, develop it through a life of varied occupations and interests. Such writers keep themselves fresh and interesting by getting out among people of many and different kinds in different sections of the country. They are constantly restoring themselves. Perhaps a humorist, to be at his best, should be also a rolling stone. Certainly many of the best have been.

It is possible, but it may not be so easy, to acquire wit and wisdom by staying at home. But a writer with aspirations to humor can very infrequently reach a high level by racking his brains for odd smiles, bright wisecracks and strained nonsense. True humor is not achieved thus, no matter how conscientiously one may try.

This is not to say that topical humor, based on the news of the day, cannot reach literary heights. It sometimes does, as witness Finley Peter Dunne's old philosopher friend, "Mr. Dooley." Mr. Dooley's comments were almost wholly confined to subjects current in the news of his day 30-odd years ago, but his shrewd sagacity and homely philosophy render his comments pertinent to events of today, which is the reason quotations from Mr. Dooley are still so often encountered.—Boston Globe.

Real Bayer Aspirin at Lowest Prices in History

A new schedule of prices for Bayer Aspirin tablets has just gone into effect. The Bayer Company introduced Bayer Aspirin in this country 35 years ago. It has since become one of the most widely used of all drug products and the price reduction will mean a saving to millions of consumers.

In announcing its new consumer price schedule, the Bayer Company issued the following statement:

"Bayer has always kept faith with its customers by giving them the finest, most uniform product that science can produce. Its decision to reduce prices is evidence of Bayer's desire to extend even further its service to its customers." The new consumer prices of Bayer Aspirin are now effective in 60,000 drug stores throughout the United States.—Adv.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington.—Instead of July proving to be a month of doldrums, which is so often the case in the National Capital, it has turned out to be one of the busiest, politically, in recent years.

A result of it is that, fully six weeks earlier than usually, the campaign issues for the fall elections are drawn squarely on President Roosevelt and the New Deal. With the initial blasts already in the record, it is quite apparent that the campaign will be predicated on the claim of the Republicans that the New Deal has not been what it was cracked up to be, and a defense by the Democratic spokesmen that we are all better off because of it.

But there is a third element to be considered in the coming campaign. It is the personality, influence and oratory of Senator Borah of Idaho. His sudden decision to do battle as a "lone wolf" has injected an issue in itself, and my information is that the Idaho senator's participation in the campaign is not to be minimized. He has a great following; he is an orator from which the country has produced few who are greater, and he has a finality about his decisions and methods of expressing them that is pretty hard to beat down.

President Roosevelt put his case before the people before he went on his vacation in his usually simple and direct style. No one deprecates his ability to do that, and I think, generally speaking, Washington observers are agreed that his proudest effort was made when he spoke to his millions of radio listeners late in June. I have heard much praise for the President as a result of his direct question to those millions: "Are you better off than you were a year ago?" Every one could understand it, and every one could analyze his own condition for himself. Of course, many of the Roosevelt opposition are criticizing the speech for "saying nothing" and for other reasons, yet I believe unbiased observers are agreed that Mr. Roosevelt opened the fall campaign of his party in a very clever manner from a political standpoint.

Respecting the effort of Chairman Henry P. Fletcher of the Republican national committee, in his opening blast, there seems to be little disagreement that he has taken a decidedly bold stand. If the Republicans are to get anywhere, it is obvious that it must be through Mr. Fletcher's leadership. When he went against the advice of some of his timid advisers, therefore, and made the President and his New Deal policies the issue, he displayed courage of a kind that is regarded around Washington as being a little unusual for a minority party chief. I am told that a good many Republicans wanted to peck away at various items of the New Deal and at various subordinates of the administration to gain favor. Mr. Fletcher apparently chose to fly straight into the fight, marking Mr. Roosevelt as the adversary and holding him personally and directly responsible for whatever shortcomings can be unearthed as a result of a year and a half of unprecedented, breath-taking activity by the New Dealers.

Mr. Fletcher's program will not be easy to execute. For example, Senator Barkley of Kentucky, who was the keynote speaker at the convention which accorded Mr. Roosevelt the Democratic nomination, already has been on the air waves with an angered answer. The Kentucky senator did not pull his punches, either.

How the Roosevelt forces will combat Senator Borah's argument is not yet apparent. They have two difficult problems in connection with the Borah attacks. In the first case, the Idaho senator really disarmed the Democrats to a certain extent when, in his initial blast, he turned one barrel on the Democrats and the other on the Republicans. He did not mince words and the Democrats cannot say with respect to Senator Borah that he spoke in generalities. So in fighting back at him, the Democrats are confronted, first, with his disclaimer that he is fighting a Republican battle and, secondly, that he avoided direct charges. Nothing could be more direct than the charge that the New Dealers have built up a bureaucracy in Washington that destroys initiative and eats up taxes.

The Republicans can get away without paying any particular attention to the Borah bombardment. Whatever criticism he levels at the Roosevelt forces naturally redounds to Republican benefit, and when Senator Borah says the Republicans are not fighting off monopoly, their natural answer is that they are not in control of the government machinery which has done away with anti-trust laws in favor of the codes and blue eagle.

I understand that there is a possibility of Senator Nye of North Dakota joining with Senator Borah. Senator Nye, although a Republican, supported the Roosevelt candidacy. It was the North Dakotan who conducted the fight against General Johnson and the recovery administration in congress last winter because of what Senator Nye felt was discrimination against the "little fellow" and in favor of big business. He made so much noise about the situation that the President eventually named the NRA board of review of which Clarence Darrow of Chicago was chairman. If Senator Nye takes up the cudgel along with Senator Borah, therefore, his attacks and criticism obviously will be directed at New Deal policies the way they worked out in NRA. With the Republican fire charging Mr. Roosevelt with full responsibility, it becomes plain that Senator Nye will be another thorn in the administration's side despite any statements he may make that he merely wants to correct some of the shortcomings.

Notwithstanding what the two "lone wolf" senators have to say or what Mr. Fletcher and front-line Republican orators charge, the Roosevelt forces are understood to be digging in behind the President's question to his radio audience.

A good many observers in Washington are inclined to the opinion that President Roosevelt is beginning to "shake down" his various boards and commissions and agencies to which he entrusted particular phases of the recovery program. The chances are, say these observers, that Mr. Roosevelt has seen too much duplication and overlapping of effort and is now engaged, through trusted advisers, in correlating the efforts to the end that some of the numerous "alphabetical agencies" can be retired.

The view above mentioned apparently was given birth by the selection of Donald Richberg to serve as head of the so-called executive council for the next several months. Mr. Richberg was given leave from his job as general counsel for NRA in order to take over the new work in which he succeeds Frank C. Walker. It was announced that Mr. Walker will have a merited vacation concurrently with the President's rest, and that Mr. Richberg would act as the eyes and ears for the Chief Executive.

But there is more to the situation than those statements. The President is aware that there is an undercurrent of differences among some of his advisers, and such a condition, of course, is not improved by overlapping of authority. It is quite evident, therefore, that Mr. Richberg has been assigned to the job of untangling the skein where several strings have become knotted. And, further, it seems to me to be only natural that there would be such difficulties where the structure of government has expanded so rapidly.

If one examines all of the facts as they stand, therefore, and has in mind how rapidly things have changed since Mr. Roosevelt took office in March, 1933, it would appear that the time has come for the settling down process.

In some quarters in Washington, the feeling has prevailed that Mr. Roosevelt went on the Hawaiian cruise in order to let administration affairs rather settle down of their own accord.

Although foreign trade experts are scattered throughout the government and are doing everything in their power to promote foreign trade, exports of American farm products continue to slump, and only recently hit the lowest point in twenty years. The Department of Agriculture made public figures the other day disclosing that exports of farm products in May aggregated exactly 50 per cent of the average from 1909 to 1914. Since those years are regarded as normal and do not include the peak years after the end of the World war, May exports this year obviously were not much more than one-third of the record years.

There is always a decline in exports of farm products in the spring, but it seems to have been a lot worse this year than usual, the total being considerably below May of 1933. Cotton apparently was the commodity for which there was least demand, and when cotton exports fall off the whole average drops because our cotton exports cut a big figure in the total shipments abroad. Department of Agriculture figures show that there were only 299,000 bales of cotton exported in May, whereas in May, 1933, the shipments of this commodity amounted to 628,000 bales. Japan, Great Britain and Germany, the three principal buyers of American cotton, each took less in May this year than in the same month of 1933.

These conditions have happened despite creation of the Import-Export bank, of which George N. Peak is chairman, and the designation of Francis B. Sayre, assistant secretary of state, to give special attention to promotion of foreign trade. These two assignments are, of course, in addition to the various agencies of the Departments of Commerce and Agriculture whose job it is to encourage foreign trade. Better than anything else, perhaps, the condition illustrates the truth of the old adage that you can lead a horse to water but you cannot make him drink. If there is no demand for our farm products abroad, you cannot sell them, all of the theories of professors notwithstanding.

"Sausage Cases" in Use for Packing Ice Cream

The difficulties of serving ice cream cheaply and conveniently may be solved by packing the perishable substance in sausage cases. Ice cream sausage has been found to save time and expense, while assuring perfect sanitary conditions. With the aid of a special filling machine the transparent cases are tightly packed with ice cream by the simple expedient of turning a crank. The sausage container may be used for all kinds of ice cream, water ices and frozen fruits. The new packing idea has been demonstrated at the Leipzig fair, proving highly successful. Instead of dishing out the ice cream, the customer buys a foot or a yard of ice cream sausage. The ice cream may be served in links of any desired thickness or length to suit the convenience of the dealer or the ultimate consumer.

Farmers Realize

Profit After Two Years of Losses

After losing heavily for two years, farmers in Will County made a little money in 1933, although most of the increase was in inventories and therefore was not realized in cash in 1933.

This is shown in a summary of the accounts which has just been returned to 30 farmers who cooperated with Farm Adviser L. W. Braham and the farm management extension service of the U. of I. College of Agriculture in keeping records.

The 30 farms made an average income of $692 a farm in 1933 as compared to an average net loss of $224 in 1932. However, as was pointed out, the better net income in 1933 was mostly the result of increases in inventory. A little of the better income was the result of increased cash income.

Figured strictly on the basis of cash income and expenses. The average for the 30 farms was a balance of $1,488 left over to meet interest payments and family living expenses. This compares with the balance of only $1,415 in 1932.

The total average receipts for each of the 30 farms in 1933 were only 51 percent of those of 1929, the summary shows. The total operating costs, after including depreciation on buildings and equipment and the operator's labor and unpaid family labor was $9.59 an acre in 1933 as compared with $12.79 in 1929.

For the state as a whole there was an increase in farm earnings in 1933 the summary reports. The important factor in the increase in earnings was the higher prices for farm products, particularly grain.

With the summary of the records from Will and other counties of the State, the farm accounting project of the U. of I. College of Agriculture has passed into its twentieth year, and there are now in the files of the farm management division a total of approximately 20,000 individual farm records. Out of the study of these records there have come reliable guides for efficient and more profitable farm management.

For instance, among the 30 accounting farms in Will County during the past year, the most profitable one third showed an average net income of $1,466, while the least successful third had an average net loss of $57 a farm.

The more successful farms harvested higher crop yields, producing 7.3 bushels more corn and 4.3 bushels more wheat an acre than the less successful farms.

Returns from $100 worth of feed fed to productive livestock averaged $155 on the most profitable farms but only $103 on the 10 least profitable farms. Sales from each dairy cow averaged practically the same on the two groups of farms, but the most successful farms averaged twice as many dairy cows a farm.

One of the important factors influencing the earnings of individual farms was the quantity of grain inventoried. All the farms taken as a whole inventoried an average of 2,078 bushels on January 1, 1933, and 1,214 bushels on December 31, 1933. In contrast, the one-third more profitable farms inventoried 1,820 bushels on January 1, 1933, and 1,514 bushels on December 31, 1933, while the less profitable farms inventoried 1,684 bushels January 1, 1933 and 708 bushels December 31, 1933.

Auto Radios Sell Well

Chevrolet dealers have sold 35,000 automobile radios to purchasers of new Chevrolet cars in the last 90 days, M. D. Douglas, parts and service manager of the Chevrolet Motor Co., has announced. The report covers only the sets installed in new 1934 Chevrolets. It does not include the additional thousands purchased from Chevrolet dealers by owners of other cars or of earlier Chevrolets.

While the accomplishment is important in itself, as setting an all-time record for radio sales by Chevrolet officials are especially interested in it as an index of the public's increased buying power. It signifies that many automobile buyers instead of contenting themselves with the car itself, have enough money over and above its purchase price to indulge their desire for additional comfort, luxury and enjoyment. The situation, it is pointed out, did not exist a year ago and the fact that it does exist today is a proof of returning good times.

KNEE-ACTION

tops a 22-year record of engineering progress that makes Chevrolet the best riding car in the low-price field

CHEVROLET Year after year, it's been the same story: Chevrolet FIRST with the NEWEST and BEST! Chevrolet leading—others following. Chevrolet out in front with the latest proved advancements. Self-starter! Sliding gear transmission! Streamlined design! It was Chevrolet aggressiveness and progressiveness that forced all low-priced cars eventually to adopt these and other major improvements. And now, this year, comes the climax of Chevrolet's engineering leadership: the Knee-Action ride! This newest of motoring sensations is a marvel of smooth, easy, gentle motion. No other ride in the world can even compare with it. It makes Chevrolet far and away the best riding car in the low-price field.

Have you noticed how America has taken to the Knee-Action ride? In the first 6 months, demand for Chevrolet cars sent production to the highest total attained by any automobile during 1934.

Revenge

By E. Claudius Waide

Sometime ago I heard one man telling another how he had revenged himself upon another who had offended him. It wasn't a nice story, however, the speaker apparently was proud of what he had done. Revenge is a form of hatred. It is always the hater and not the hated that suffers most.

As I walked away, I could not help thinking of that simple yet noble character, Abraham Lincoln, and what he did to Chase. Mr. Chase, although a member of the cabinet, was, and had been, one of the bitterest critics of Mr. Lincoln's administration. When he retired from the cabinet he seemed to be more bitter than ever before, and went about the country trying to poison the minds of the people against the President.

About this time Chief Justice Roger Taney died, and to the surprise of every one who knew the facts, the President nominated his arch enemy for the position. Lincoln paid no attention to the harm that Chase had done him. He overlooked the imperfections in the man who otherwise was qualified to head the Supreme Court of the United States.

Do good unto those who despitefully use you. Be kind and gentle with those who are crude and rough. In this respect, we can all be as great as Lincoln.

"Milk, Fruits and Vegetables Essential to School Child's Diet," Says Expert

By FRANCES BERKELEY FLOORE
Director of Dietetics, St. Luke's Hospital

PREPARING the child for school should consist of something more than simply getting his clothes in order and telling him to mind teacher.

The young child, especially the first grader who is going to be away from parental care for perhaps the first time, should have certain rules of safety impressed on him. Of course he should not be allowed to cross city streets alone—not at first at any rate. If there is not a policeman on duty at street crossings an older child should go with him. In any case the child should be warned against running after balls, hats and so forth which have blown into the street.

With present conditions, it is doubly necessary to warn children against going with strangers. The child should be able to say his name and address, his parents' names and the name of his school, so that in case he should ever stray from school he will be able to give this information.

Now, when for the first time the beginning school child is going to be "exposed" to a great many other children, he should have all the protection against contagious disease that is available. Vaccination will guard the child against smallpox. If he has not already been immunized against diphtheria this should certainly be taken care of before sending him off to school. Of course the preventive measures for diphtheria should have begun when the child was six months' old as this disease occurs most often in children under school age. The treatment consists of two little doses of toxoid to the child under ten years or three doses of toxin-antitoxin to the child over ten. This is sure protection.

Other precautions that the parent should take before entering the child in school, whether it be for the first or the eighth time, are to make sure that he does not have defective eyesight or hearing, enlarged and diseased tonsils and adenoids, or decayed teeth—defects which not only affect the physical health, but by retarding him in school may lead to unfortunate behavior traits, caused by not being able to keep up with the other children.

In cases where the eyesight or hearing cannot be immediately improved, he can be so seated in the room that the trouble will not hold him back in his work.

In addition to these guards against specific illnesses, every care should be taken to maintain the child's general health. Don't relax your supervision over his food just because he is going to school and perhaps eating his lunch away from you. Remember that it is just as necessary now that he have his glass of milk at every meal and fresh fruits and vegetables every day.

This good general physical condition is the surest way to ward off what statistics show to be the most common illness among children—colds, appearing in such various forms as grippe and influenza.

"Gas heat taught us something about living"

Anton Kohout, 1425 S. 59th Court, Cicero, tells why he and his family are enthusiastic about Gas Heat

"I used to think," says Mr. Kohout, "that if you owned a home you had to clean up after soot and dirt, tramp up and down stairs early in the morning, late at night, to fix the furnace. But with gas heat we've changed our ideas."

No soot, no dirt, no furnace muss

More than 20,000 families in the Chicago-land area know that gas heat has brought pleasures and comforts to their homes never possible with their old heating systems. As Mr. Kohout says, "The house stays clean. The furnace never needs attention." Gas heat is clean heat. No soot, no dirt, no furnace muss. And no trouble, because a little thermostat on the wall regulates the temperature of your house.

Now—before you order your next winter's fuel supply, get the facts about gas heat. Remember, it costs you nothing for equipment to try gas heat. You try it for one month, two months, or a year before you decide. While you are trying it you pay only $3 a month rental during the heating months in the average home. This charge is included with the bill for the gas you use. If at any time within the year you decide you don't like gas heat we'll remove it and replace your former heating equipment in good workmanlike condition.

Order gas heat now

It will pay you to order gas heat now. Think of it. A clean basement all summer long. And next winter no coal shoveling, hauling ashes, getting up at daybreak to fix the fire.

Phone today for free estimate and full details of our startling offer.

With gas heat there is no dust, no soot. Mrs. Kohout, pointing to her curtains, says, "The house stays clean."

YOU INVEST

FAIR PLANS BIG FARM PROGRAM

Barn Dance, Rural Events
Featured at Chicago
Aug. 11 to 18.

Chicago.—Four million persons have entered the gates of the new World's Fair since it opened here May 26. Most of the throngs that have thrilled to the new spectacle, the new "foreign villages," which offer in themselves a "tour of the world," the new shows and the new free entertainment projects, are city dwellers. Chicagoans, visitors from other cities all over the United States and visitors from foreign countries have poured in, in large numbers.

But the real farmer-visitors' invasion of A Century of Progress has not yet begun. It will reach its peak when the Fair celebrates Farm Week, from August 11 to August 18, inclusive.

Last year Farm Week accounted for the largest single week's attendance of the entire Fair. Plans to make the celebration interesting and important to farmers are even more elaborate now than last year, according to the events division of the exposition.

WLS Barn Dance at Fair.

Saturday, August 11, will lead off the program with a massive farm parade, including bands, farm implements, machinery and equipment and farm animals. Depicting the modernization of agriculture, it will be one of the longest and most comprehensive pageants of the entire exposition.

Sunday, August 12, will see special music and farm programs interlinked with the observance of Chicago Incorporation day, with Chicago acting as host to the out-of-town multitudes.

Rexford Tugwell, assistant secretary of agriculture, has been invited to be the principal speaker of the Farm Organization day program Monday, Tuesday will be farm radio day, with the entire WLS "Barn Dance" presenting a program in the Court of States; 40,000 persons saw this event in 1933.

Aerial Sham Battle Planned.

The farmer's wife will have her day Wednesday, August 15, which has been named Farm Women's day, with special programs arranged to pay tribute to the women who battled to carve a nation out of the wilderness. Farm Youth day, Thursday, will be full of recognition of the future farmers of the land, with emphasis on 4-H club work.

Programs of interest to rural newspapers and magazines will feature Farm Press day, Friday, Saturday, August 18, will be farm music day, with its high spot the gigantic Chicagoland Music festival in Soldier Field, adjoining the Fair grounds. This annual event has attracted more than a half million persons in the four years of its existence. This day will also see many special contests, such as milk-maid, husband-calling and hog-calling contests.

Saturday is also Illinois day. There will be a review of 10,000 troops and demonstrations by anti-aircraft artillery units, shooting with tracer bullets at balloon targets towed by airplanes.

Farm Exhibits Are Many.

During Farm Week parties of farmers will be taken on free guided tours of the Fair grounds. Fair visitors, with only a limited time to spend, will in this way be able to see everything of vital interest to them.

Henry Ford's industrialized barn, where he shows how the farmer may, at low cost, raise soy beans, obtain the residue and process it himself, making industrial products for which he can obtain a profitable revenue, is one of the new exhibits. Another is the International Harvester company's radio-controlled tractor, which demonstrates how farming may be done from an easy chair on the veranda. Model farm homes will attract many rural sightseers, as will the exhibits of the great packing plants and the automobile manufacturers.

The Brook Hill Dairy farm, with its model farm of 1930, shows the last word in modern milk production, from cow to bottle. The International Egg Laying contest is a huge laboratory where the farmer may study the latest egg-production methods first-hand. Scores of commercial exhibitors will have displays of prime interest to Farm-Week visitors.

Special Rates Lower Cost.

Special railroad and bus rates will make it easier for the farmer to get to the Fair this summer. Automobile agencies and oil stations will give him assistance in highway travel. At the Fair, he will find costs surprisingly low. Restaurants are cheaper, transportation is cheaper, there is plentiful free entertainment and eighty per cent of all the comfort stations are free.

Probably one of the leading attractions for rural visitors will be the foreign villages, so faithful in reproductions of life and scenes in fifteen countries that they offer the equivalent of a tour of the world, right on the Fair grounds.

Secret of Big Light Beam

In huge electric searchlights that cast beams visible for 50 or 60 miles on clear nights, the carbons are not like those of ordinary arc lamps. Instead, the electrodes are cored carbons containing chemicals in the cores. The main source of light is a small body of gas contained in the crater at the end of the positive electrode. This crater of gas quadruples the strength of the beam.

Midgets Hobnob With Lofty Towers at Fair

Dancing on the green is a daily feature of Merrie England, one of the 15 foreign villages in Chicago World's Fair which offer visitors a "tour of the world." Inset: Some of the world's tiniest people, on view at the Fair's Midget City.

State Ford Dealers See World's Fair

Approximately 400 Ford dealers, salesmen and their families from the Chicago Branch of the Ford Motor Company are shown above in the rotunda of the huge Ford Exposition Building on the grounds of A Century of Progress, Chicago, where they were guests for one day of the Ford Motor Company. The group, representing parts of Illinois, Indiana and Iowa, attended a luncheon on the Fair grounds at which W. C. Cowling, general sales manager of the Ford Company, was the principal speaker. Following the luncheon, the dealers spent the remainder of the day inspecting the huge Ford Exposition and other exhibits of the 1934 World's Fair.

Special Contests, Exhibits Feature Fair Farm Week

Henry Ford's Industrialized Barn, shown here, a new exhibit at the Chicago World's Fair this year, demonstrates how farmers can effect their own relief by raising and processing soy beans. Left inset: John C. Dameron, Weston, Ill., whose hog-calling championship will be a mark for farmers to shoot at during Farm Week at the Fair, Aug. 11 to 18. Right inset:

Mrs. Nick Owenga, Blue Island, Ill., last year's husband-calling champion, whose title is also at stake. The milk-maid's championship and other similar titles will also be contested.

Veteran User Helps Open New Telephone Building

GEN. JAMES ASHTON
He took part recently in the opening of a new telephone building in Tacoma.

Probably few cities have as many original telephone subscribers covering a half century as Tacoma, Washington, where six of the original 22 subscribers are still using the service.

These six men, General James Ashton, John S. Baker, Walter J. Thompson, Henry Drumm, Stuart Rice and W. P. Bonney, have seen virtually the whole history of the telephone in Washington, which had less than 100 telephones when they first took the service early in 1884.

Two newspapers, the Tacoma Ledger and the Tacoma Daily News (now News-Tribune) were also among the original 22 subscribers, and have since then continuously maintained telephone service although with changing managements and staffs. A ninth member of the first 22, N. B. Coffman, is still a subscriber in Chehalis, Wash.

Gen. Ashton, as a young lawyer, ordered his first telephone placed in his law office, and has had one there continuously throughout the half century. He is a leader in the state, which well remembers when he commanded the troops sent from Tacoma to maintain order after the disastrous Seattle fire of 1889.

General Ashton recently took part in opening a new telephone building with new equipment in Tacoma, a city of 107,000 population.

"THEY ALSO SERVE WHO ONLY STAND AND WAIT"

What is believed to be the oldest telephone pole in New England is still doing active duty on Cape Cod in Massachusetts. It stands at Craigville, and is one of three poles left of the original line which ran from Boston to Hyannis.

The pole is of black chestnut, and despite the fact that it has passed through 39 years of Cape Cod's famous north-east storms, it is still sound.

Leads Most Imitated Orchestra in Country

Jack Denny

If you want to hear the original of the most imitated orchestra in the country just tune in your radio Wednesday night to hear Jack Denny's orchestra which supplies the musical background for the Harry Richman program.

Jack Denny, whose music is heard by millions, had to go from New York to Montreal to get attention for his orchestra in New York.

Denny and his musicians appeared at the Mount Royal Hotel in Montreal for five and a half years when they were called to the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York and fame and fortune.

Denny never rehearses his band. He has a substitute handle rehearsals.

He personally makes every arrangement his boys play.

His orchestra has never been successfully imitated—although many have tried.

He and his boys have only laid off three weeks in eleven years.

There's no brass in the Denny orchestra. He favors the harp and the violin, the accordion and the sweeter instruments.

Denny strives for melody and smoothness. He succeeds in achieving a decided rhythm.

Millions are enjoying Denny's music every Wednesday night.

"New" Beauty Prescription Is Easy, Pleasant and Safe

Lovely Jane Barnes, Fox Featured Player, shown drinking milk as a part of her diet. "It's one of the good habits" she says.

WHEN you go to a beauty shop, naturally you don't expect a shampoo to improve your complexion or a facial to make your hair gleam.

Exterior beauty applications are necessarily limited in their effect—a definite treatment for a definite beauty problem. It is not so with "inside" beauty culture. There is one single treatment that will not only improve your figure but every part of you—your hair, complexion and general attractiveness.

It is simply this—to be taken every day: At least a pint of fresh milk; two fruits (one citric or tomato); two vegetables other than potatoes, plus eggs several times a week. Supplement this diet of course with other foods, the amount depending on whether you want to gain weight, lose it, or stay normal.

"Guaranteed" by Nutritionists.

We cannot all be experts in all things, so, naturally we cannot infallibly choose the very best lotion, rouge, or lipstick; we have to take some one else's word for it—usually the word of the maker of the product. Considering that what we prescribe for our selves in the way of beauty treatments is almost as important from the health standpoint as what the doctor prescribes for us to cure physical ills, it is strange that we don't examine more carefully into what is in those beauty preparations we apply to ourselves.

But on this basic diet treatment you need take no manufacturer's word. Unbiased nutritional scientists agree that these four foods taken in abundance each day, are essential for the most radiant health which is beauty's firmest foundation.

Delivered at Your Door.

Another advantage of this diet treatment is its convenience. No traveling long distances to beauty shops—no getting up fifteen minutes earlier to apply it. The ingredients of this diet prescription are all delivered right at your door by your milkman and grocer. You simply "take" them in your meals, with no extra trouble and no extra expense.

And best of all, they are pleasant to use—for these four foods are among the most appetizing of all the elements of our diet.

HIGH IMPORTANCE OF LITTLE CAPES

PATTERN 9966

When you button the little capes onto the shoulders of this frock you attach to it just enough formality to make it go places very smartly. In the house, the sleeveless bodice is as cool as can be—and exceedingly chic. Which makes it a model that serves two purposes—and equally well! And when in addition you bear in mind that it does wonderfully flattering things to its wearer's figure—there doesn't seem to be much question about the wisdom of adding it to one's wardrobe.

Pattern 9966 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 4 yards 39-inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth Street, New York, N. Y.

SYNOPSIS

Seeking death by throwing herself from Lone Mesa, to escape dishonor at the hands of a drunken desperado, Sonya Savarin allows herself to be rescued by her suddenly repentant attacker. The girl is a self-appointed physician to the Navajo Indians, living on an Arizona sheep ranch with her brother Serge, his wife, Lila, and their small daughter, Babu. She is engaged to Rodney Blake, wealthy New Yorker, but her heart is with the friendless Navajos and she evades a wedding. Sonya pulls Little Moon, wife of Two Fingers, a Navajo, through the crisis of an illness. Two Fingers is deeply grateful. Blake returns to New York, declaring he will give Sonya six more months and then demand she keep her promise to marry him. Sonya again meets the man whose advances she had repulsed on Lone Mesa. He tells her he bitterly regrets his action. Sonya is affected, but unforgiving. She hears rumors of a border bandit "El Capitan Diablo," and vaguely connects him with her attacker. On Lone Mesa she again comes upon the strange young man, but she no longer fears him. When he reiterates his sorrow over his misconduct, she indicates forgiveness and assures him a man can always change for the better.

Sonya was as good as her word. On Wednesday of that week she took the disreputable old car and set out across the wild and lonely land in the general direction of the government school for which Satter was the gathering agent.

She had never been there, but she knew where it was, and she had once met the superintendent, a polished, hard-eyed efficiency expert who had gone out of his way to attract her attention. He was a widower and seemed to fancy himself considerably, which was more than Sonya did.

The large rooms were sweetly cool in the early summer heat, and she took off her hat and leaned back in her chair in grateful enjoyment.

She had not long to wait, for presently the superintendent, a Mr. Claude Spartow, came in briskly with extended hand.

"Why, Miss Savarin—Doctor Savarin, I should say, though the austere title don't seem to belong to a girl like you—this is a pleasure, I assure you! Come right into my office."

He led her into his private office, a spacious, comfortable place, its walls lined with filing cases, and pulled up the deepest big chair.

"There," he said. "That's better. Now relax. You must be tired."

"No," said Sonya. "I'm not, and I'm in somewhat of a hurry. I've come for the two children of the Indian, Hosteen Nez, over in the big cut beyond Lone Mesa, just on the line of the Reservation. This case is rather pitiful, Mr. Spartow, and I'd like to enlist your attention to it. Mr. Satter will remember. I came upon him taking the children, not so many weeks back—very near the end of the term—and the parents are 'wild Indians.' They don't understand either the necessity or the methods employed in the matter of giving up their children, and I begged off the littlest one from Mr. Satter. The mother had run herself nearly into collapse, hanging on the backboard's tail. She is in a serious condition now, with the grief over their disappearance. Doesn't eat. Looks awful. And Mr. Satter had forgotten to tell them where to come for the children. It is rather hard, when you think of it, on parents, you know, either red or white. As it would take the Hosteen some days to get here and back with his horses to fetch them, I'd like to take the children to them myself. I will be responsible to you for them."

As the girl talked the man's sharp eyes regarded her with an alertness of expression that changed to guardedness as she mentioned Satter's lapse of memory. Now he leaned toward her, smiling.

"Why, how kind of you, my dear Miss Savarin!" he said. "Few women of this day would take so much trouble for ignorant Indians. Of course you may take the little ones. But surely you're not starting back today? You'll stay with us for the night and get a good early start tomorrow, if I have my way."

"Oh, my, no!" said Sonya. "I'll get on my way as quickly as possible. Will it take long to get them ready?"

"If you really think you must go," he said regretfully, "I'll have them made ready at once. It won't take long."

The two were presently brought to her, their belongings in a neat bundle. They still looked as they had looked that day in the buckboard, like frightened quail.

Sonya smiled at them, took their unresisting hands.

Then she smiled at Spartow.

"I thank you, sir," she said gently, "and I shall not forget your kindness in letting me take them. I hope you'll ask Mr. Satter to tell the fathers next time, will you please, Mr. Spartow?"

Mr. Spartow returned the smile with a look that promised to ask the government for a million-dollar loan if she thought it necessary.

And presently Sonya Savarin was driving down across the illimitable levels with joy in her heart and the hushed little Navajos huddled in against her with instinctive trust.

She was thinking what fun she would have watching Cactus Flower's haggard face when she took them in to the hidden hogan in the canyon.

CHAPTER V

Deep Things Begin to Glimmer.

That little matter proved almost more than she could stand, however, for the Indian mother, watching the east continually since her previous visit, having taken her advice literally, collapsed at sight of her children, and Sonya had a brisk half hour in bringing her round again.

When she was able to clasp them in her shaking arms the sight was enough to wring a heart less soft than Doctor Sonya's.

But all's well that ends well, and the girl finally rode away, leading her extra horse with a smile on her lips and the deep light in her eyes that Rod Blake called fanaticism.

Maybe it was, but it made her foolishly happy to see this poor family united again. And Hosteen Nez had looked over his woman's head at her exactly as Two Fingers had and called her Blue South Woman in the Sun. It was all he said, but it was pregnant with deep things, and Sonya knew it so.

So she opened her lips and sang. And then she came to the canyon's mouth and caught her breath sharply, for a man sat there on a golden horse. He looked like a young god with the sunlight on his hair, and his eyes as blue as the heavens, and the grave look on his handsome face.

"Forgive me," he said quickly, "for being in your trail again."

"Why?" she said as quickly. "It is free country."

"Yes, I know. But I promised to stay away."

"That was from Lone Mesa."

"The intent was everywhere. I meant it, too—was goin'—going to keep my word, but I seem to come back regardless."

Three Times the Transference of Something from the Plane to Un d'Oro's Saddle Took Place.

Sonya sat and looked at him steadily, her sweet face grave too. He bore her scrutiny quietly, though a muscle twitched in his cheek, and there was a seeming of strain in his face.

"I've thought a lot about you," the girl said presently. "Why, I don't just know. I shouldn't, by all the rules of my life's game, but I have. Tell me—if you care to—where have you been since I saw you last? Where do you live?"

He moved in his saddle, put his hat back on his head, laid his hands on his pommel.

"Miss Savarin," he said, "I can't tell you. A lot of places for th' first question—nowhere for th' last one. I told you before, I wasn't fit to talk to. I am a drifter, if you like, just goin' through th' country."

"Oh, no, you're not," said Sonya. "The day you came in the store you were familiar with the place and had been there before. Don't you think I know a few things?"

"What do you know?" he asked quickly.

"Nothing concrete, only I know a stranger when I see one by his very actions. Well, we won't talk of that," she added gently, "where are you going now?"

"Why, nowhere. That is—I was just ridin' around for exercise, sort of. Un d'Oro, here, he needs a lot of exercise."

He smiled and patted the shining neck at his saddle bow.

"Un d'Oro—Golden One," said Sonya. "What a lovely name. And what a wonderful horse. He's the most beautiful thing I ever saw done up in horsehide. You love him, don't you?"

The man's face lighted as with inner fire.

"Well—some," he said.

For a while they sat in silence, at a loss for something to talk about, and then Sonya told him about Cactus Flower and how Mr. Satter had taken her children.

"D—n!" he said flushing. "Excuse me—but some people just ain't human. I'd like to see that agent on—"

He stopped, and Sonya felt her heart contract, for she knew he had almost said "a cross."

What was this man? What was in the soul of him? What strange contradictions? What savageries and contritions, what sympathies and cruelties? What connection did he have with those awful retributions across the Border of which the Servant had hinted? What did the strange old man know about him? The henchman of Beelzebub he had called him—for no other in all this country answered to the description of the Blue-eyed One with Bronze-colored Hair. Sonya felt cold, as if a wind of portent had blown across her spirit. And swift on its heels a sadness came, the odd, unaccountable feeling of personal loss and sorrow which had assailed her that night at Myra's.

She shook herself, mentally and actually, and was angry at herself again, and when this man spoke she listened, forgetting.

"I'm a violent man, Miss Savarin," he said strongly, "and my life won't bear th' light—but a thing like that makes my blood boil. There ain't no manner of use hurting something that can't fight back, and a woman an' a child—well, they're set aside, some way, like a starvin' kitten, or a dog that no one wants. No kind of a man would do them a harm—not an' be a man."

"You think that—honestly?" said Sonya. "Right in your heart?"

"Why, of course," he said surprised. "Don't you?"

"Yes, oh, yes, a woman feels like that, but men are different. I just wondered."

"Have you been back to Lone Mesa?" he asked presently.

"No," said Sonya. "I haven't. I've been pretty busy. Housecleaning and sewing. Have you?"

"Twice. At night. Watched th' moon come up across th' desert, and it was wonderful. A man can't describe it—like new life comin' to a dead world."

"I know," said Sonya. "I've seen it from there myself."

"Alone? My G—d, Miss Savarin, you shouldn't be goin' around this country by yourself like that!"

"Why not? I'm perfectly safe. Everyone knows me, and there isn't a Navajo, drunk or otherwise, who'd say a word to me."

"Not th' Navys, no, ma'am," he said painfully, "but they ain't all there are, you know."

How well she knew! But she was sorry the inference had been drawn.

"As for being drunk—will you believe me when I say I haven't touched a glass or a bottle since—since that day—on th' cliff? Every time I've tried, your face has come before me plain as plain—the white fury of it, the courage—G—d! I choke an' quit tryin'."

"I'm glad," she said. "Didn't I tell you it was never too late to look up! Didn't I?"

"Sure you did, but that don't mean anything in this case. I'm just telling you that your face stopped my liquor."

"It'll stop a lot of things for you," the girl said in a rush and was astonished at herself.

"What—do you mean?" he said slowly.

"I—oh, I don't know!" said Sonya, trembling. "Only I know you've got to stop—stop that Border stuff. That you've got to change—the leopard spots."

"You," he said, wetting his lips, which had suddenly lost their color, "you—want me to—do that?"

"Yes," said Sonya thickly, "yes."

"Then, by G—d!" he said through his teeth, "I'll—"

What he meant to say was not apparent, for at that moment they both heard what they had been too tensely strung to hear before—the roar of a motor in the sky. A small gray ship slipped down directly over their heads and dropped to a landing on the desert out beyond. The man took one look, and reaching out an arm, he pushed Sonya and Darkness back into the canyon's mouth. Un d'Oro shielding them both. The touch of his breast against her shoulder, the scent of him, tobacco and sweat, the nearness of his bronze cheek, sent a wave of weakness over the girl.

"Get back!" he rasped, "for th' love of heaven! Go in deep, please, an' don't come out till it's gone."

Then he had struck his heels to Un d'Oro's shining flanks and was out like a flash across the sand.

For a moment Sonya sat where he had left her, shaking as with a chill, bewildered and a little scared.

What was this?

What had driven the blood from his face?

And why did he go straight to the plane if he was frightened?

Here was the answer to some of her questions, that she knew instinctively. If only she could go out there herself! She could not even see from where Darkness stood, so prompt and so efficient had been his action. But she must see. Sonya's lips set, as they did when she faced a crisis for her skill, and she dismounted and, dropping Darkness' rein, went forward carefully the few steps that separated her from the sheer edge of the canyon's mouth. Taking off her hat, she carefully leaned along the rock until her line of vision reached the open and the plane. And what she saw bewildered her more than she had been before. The Blue-eyed One was off Un d'Oro, and one man was on the ground beside him, while another was bent down in the after cockpit. This one rose, as she looked, and gave something to the other, who in turn handed it to the rider.

And he, with care and swiftness, put it in his saddlebags.

Three times the transference of something from the plane to Un d'Oro's saddle took place. Then the stranger climbed back in the forward cockpit, the plane, which had never stopped its engine, roared a moment, slid along the sand a little way, picked up its tail and took off. And Un d'Oro was loping away, headed for the town.

ELIJAH HEARS GOD'S VOICE

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 19:1-21.
GOLDEN TEXT—Therefore Eli said unto Samuel, Go, lie down: and it shall be, if he call thee, that thou shalt say, Lord, for thy servant heareth. So Samuel went and lay down in his place. I Samuel 3:3.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Elijah Listening to God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—When Elijah Was Ready to Give Up.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Does God Speak to Us?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Hearing and Obeying God.

This lesson story proves Elijah to have been a man of like passions as we are (James 5:17).

1. Elijah's Flight (vv. 1-14).

Upon Ahab's return from the excitement on Mt. Carmel he told his wife all that Elijah had done—that even all her prophets had been hewn to pieces by the sword. This so enraged her that she sent a message of death to Elijah who seemed to have been waiting at the gate (vv. 1, 2). Though Elijah had courageously stood before the king and the priests of Baal, he now covered before this woman and fled for his life.

1. Elijah under the juniper tree (vv. 3-7). The juniper tree was a shrub of the desert which afforded shelter and protection to travelers from the burning sun by day and the cold wind by night.

a. His request (v. 4). This was that he might die. The discouragement and despondency of Elijah was due to the nervous strain of nearly four years of unusual service for God which culminated on Mt. Carmel.

b. God's tender treatment (vv. 5-7). (1) He gave him sleep (v. 5). The Lord knew that Elijah needed sleep.

(2) He sent an angel to cook Elijah's meal (vv. 6, 7). The angel of the Lord is usually understood to be the second member of the Holy Trinity. Thus we see Jehovah-Jesus preparing food for his servant Elijah just as he did afterward for his discouraged disciples by Galilee (John 21:19). God again gave him sleep and food.

2. Elijah at Horeb (vv. 8-14). God had kindly ministered to his discouraged prophet so that he would be in a fit condition to receive the needed instruction and correction. Elijah had erred in running away from his field of ministry. God as a tender Father nursed back to health this runaway and erring child of his before issuing the needed and just reprimand.

a. God's interview with Elijah in the cave (vv. 9, 10).

(1) God's question (v. 9). "What doest thou here Elijah?" This was a stinging rebuke though most kindly given. It implied that his appointed messenger was now far away from the field of duty. Elijah was not where God wanted him but God sought him where he was.

(2) Elijah's answer (v. 10). Elijah tried to vindicate himself by asserting his jealousy loyalty to God. Because of this loyalty the people had not only rejected his message and dishonored God, but had sought to destroy him.

b. God's interview with Elijah on the Mount (vv. 11-14). While standing before the Lord on the Mount, God caused a mighty demonstration of wind, earthquake and fire to pass before him, to show him the nature of the work which he had been doing for God, and to show him what was lacking in his work for the fullest attainment of success. Elijah had about him much of the whirlwind, earthquake, and fire. His work had been terrifying and alarming, but it lacked in gentleness and love. The world is not taken for Christ by the energy of the flesh and the enthusiasm of conventions, but by quiet hearts proclaiming God's word in the energy of the Holy Spirit, trusting him to do the work.

11. Elijah's Return (vv. 15-18). Though Elijah had erred, God brought him again into his service. It is most comforting to know that God does not reject his servants because of their failures in times of despondency. He deals with them after the motives of their hearts. Before God would come in his chariot to take Elijah home, he sent him upon a threefold ministry:

1. To anoint Hazael king over Syria (v. 15).

2. To anoint Jehu king over Israel (v. 16).

3. To anoint Elisha as his own successor (vv. 19-21).

111. The Seven Thousand Faithful Ones (v. 18).

It must have encouraged Elijah greatly to be assured that seven thousand had not yet bowed their knees to Baal. Though Elijah's time of ministry was soon to close, the work must be carried on. His mantle fell upon Elisha.

To the Glory of God

Paul said: "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." If we do these little things under the compulsion of a great motive—the glory of God—we will some day find that God has led us through these paths of obscurity in order that he might bring up to some great deed that will advance the interests of his kingdom.

Shuts Out the Gospel

When people base their culture solely upon the wisdom of this world, the Gospel has small chance with them.

Curing Stomach Ulcer Without Operation

IT is only natural that everybody dislikes the idea of an operation—hospital, anesthetic, operation, after care—and would sooner put up with a certain amount of distress and pain than undergo it.

One of the types of cases where operation is put off as long as possible is in ulcer of the stomach. The use of small soft meals, and the use, following these, of regular doses of alkalis, if persisted in long enough, often does away with the need of an operation.

However there are cases that despite this treatment do not do well, as the ulcer is too deeply seated in the lining of the stomach or in the first part of the small intestine, together with an overabundant supply of the acid digestive juice of the stomach. In some of these cases another method of treating the ulcer is undertaken before resorting to operation, as the last hope.

Some years ago a method was tried out in the Toronto General hospital; this was by means of a tube which was inserted through patients' nostril or mouth, down past the stomach and first part of the small intestine (the duodenum) to the jejunum or second part of the small intestine. Through this tube soft food was poured at frequent intervals. Thus the patient was able to get his usual nourishment without the stomach or duodenum having to handle it at all.

As you know it is the movements of the stomach and the pouring out of the stomach's acid juice which prevents the ulcer from healing. With no food going into the stomach the stomach walls, nerves, digestive processes all get a complete rest and this complete rest enables the ulcer to heal.

The tube can be fastened in position to the nose or mouth by adhesive tape or other methods, and is left in position usually for three weeks although in mild cases one week may be sufficient.

Remember, this treatment is not given in simple chronic cases of ulcer, but only in the more severe or complicated cases such as those mentioned above.

This method is of use also in severe inflammation of the stomach where real rest is an absolute necessity for the stomach.

It must be admitted, however, that there are some cases where only operation will bring results.

Keeping in Step Mentally

YOU have likely heard the story of the fond mother who on seeing a company of school boys marching by, said that all the children were out of step except her boy.

No one blames the mother for loving her boy, thinking he is about right even if he is "different" from others, but it is this very mother care that interferes with the boy's chances of remaining normal like other youngsters.

When the boy gets into trouble with other youngsters the mother considers the other youngsters to be entirely to blame; if the trouble occurs at school then the school or the teacher must be to blame.

Some one has spoken of this boy as the "overprotected" boy, and quite rightly states that the parent is at fault and in her anxiety to make things "smooth" for him actually takes away his strength of character. He learns to depend upon the parent for everything including getting him out of trouble when he is in the wrong.

Unfortunately if this overprotection continues the boy or girl grows into manhood or womanhood and is always looking for support, for a defender, instead of supporting or defending himself.

In other words the youngster is "out of step" with life, and only by getting "in step" can the proper mental development occur.

You can thus see that if any progress is to be made with the overprotected child, it means that the mother or father should be taught that the youngster must learn to stand on his own feet, make his own progress, take his own defeats, fight his own battles, and suffer his just punishment.

No one wants any more war; not a single nation in the world, and not even the real soldier himself wants it.

However there is one thing about the military drill, the marching or other parts belonging to, and that is that the word of command must be obeyed correctly. And the boy who is "out of step" is at once noticeable to the instructor. For the time being each boy whether rich or poor, brainy or dull, is a part of a machine, and must not spoil the perfect working of the machine by being "out of step." This is the training of drill and of athletic games.

Remember the only difference between you and the mental patient is that he is "out of step" with the rest of mankind, and you are not.

Nazi Commandments

The nine commandments of the Nazi are as follows: (1) One for all: First for every one a job; then for every one his job. (2) For the German youth: Take a spade in your hand and go out on the land. (3) For German girls: Take hold of kettle, broom and pan; then you'll readily get a man. (4) For the worker: Take work of any kind, however rigorous, for that alone makes you and the nation vigorous. (5). For the professional woman: Shop and office leave alone; your real work is in the home. (6) For business leaders: A grumbler deprives of bread himself and others, an optimist conquers all business bothers. (7) For housewives: Don't steal your time away from child and husband; get help by hiring a domestic servant. (8) For the peasant: The harder a state fares, the more soil must be cultivated (Frederick the Great). (9) For servants of the state: Whoever still remains a bureaucrat does not fit in today's combat.

DR. W.E. FITCH TALKS ON MINERAL WATER

Tells Why It Is Often Helpful for "Rheumatic" Aches and Pains

EUROPEAN SCIENTISTS CONFIRM OPINION

Recently William Edward Fitch, M. D., member of the International Society of Medical Hydrology and author of that comprehensive book "Mineral Waters of the United States and American Spas" spoke as follows on a program over the National Broadcasting System:

"Drinking a mineral water is not like drinking an ordinary water, for in addition to the virtues and therapeutic value of the water itself, the combined minerals, some of which are in such infinitesimal proportions as almost to defy man's limited power of analysis, produce systemic changes which affect disease profoundly. . . . In Europe, of course, mineral water treatment has been known for thousands of years, and is universally accepted. . . . I am happy to have contributed in a small way to the spread of knowledge of this form of treatment in our own great country, for here we have the same needs as Europe's population—the same diseases, the same suffering, the same problems—and bountiful Nature has provided the same form of treatment—natural American mineral waters sparkling and bubbling from the earth, ready and able to end serious and painful disease."

When we think of what Dr. Fitch has said of the real value of mineral waters—and then think how very few people can afford to travel to America's mineral water resorts—it is very important to know about Crazy Water Crystals, and the happiness they have brought to millions suffering from "rheumatic" aches and pains and other chronic ailments. Crazy Water Crystals are just precious minerals crystallized from a great natural mineral water—a type of mineral water that has built one of America's greatest health resorts, to which 150,000 people flock every year. You just mix Crazy Water Crystals with plain water, and make a great mineral water at home.

And Crazy Water Crystals are very economical. A standard sized package costs only $1.50 and is sufficient for several weeks treatment in your own home. Crazy Water Co., Mineral Wells, Texas.

Secretary of State Pleads for Safety

Mutual consideration of each others rights and problems was urged upon both motorists and pedestrians in a safety bulletin issued by Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes the past week. "Safety for pedestrians is one of the greatest traffic problems of the day," the bulletin said. "Motor vehicle accidents involving pedestrians account for more than fifty per cent of the total of fatal traffic accidents each year. "Greater care on the part of pedestrians would eliminate much of it, but in cities greater care of both pedestrians and motorists will be necessary before an appreciable change is made in the accident rate. Both pedestrians and motorists must be educated in safety methods. It is necessary that they be considerate of one another. "Upon highways and roads where there are no sidewalks or pathways persons travelling by foot should keep to the left side of the road and face traffic. Even then vigilance must be maintained for travelling the left side of the road also has its dangers at certain points, particularly on inside curves. "Within cities most accidents to pedestrians happen at intersections where there are no traffic lights, or between intersections. Accidents to pedestrians between intersections prove the need for education and enforcement of regulations prohibiting that practice. "Traffic laws are valuable but for the telling results the public must be depended on for voluntary compliance with the rules of proper conduct. "The cost each year of deaths, injuries and economic loss due to traffic accidents, the bulletin said, is rapidly approaching a billion dollars.

Vast Puzzle of the Cosmos

The speed of solar rotation is so great that the earth only comes under the influences of disturbed areas of the sun as they periodically revolve. At such times as the earth becomes a good target, normal radio transmission is affected by the influences issuing from these regions.

During the periods when these disturbances affect the earth, the signal intensity of short waves is reduced and radio telephone service is affected. In the case of very long waves, there is a slight improvement in the daytime, although they are somewhat lessened in strength at night. The European service is affected by these conditions to perhaps a greater extent than the other services.

Bell System engineers are constantly sounding the upper atmosphere, which has so much to do with radio transmission, and have found many interesting facts related to solar and cosmic influences. While these studies have yielded many pieces of information destined to fit into the vast puzzle of the cosmos, there remains much to be learned by further scientific exploration.

Keeps Tabs on Solar Effects

Thus it is that the engineers responsible for the maintenance of satisfactory overseas radio telephone service have such interest in these matters. The chief technical operator of the transatlantic radio telephone control room in New York City keeps a record of all solar activities and their effects on the radio telephone service. This information is studied carefully in order that it may become a factor in the improvement of the service.

Commenting on the report of the National Fire Waste Council that the annual loss to farmers from fire would build 40,000 homes of a value of $2,500 each, a recent issue of the Prairie du Sac, Wis., News points out the value of the telephone on the farm in case of fire as a means of summoning aid quickly and saving buildings and live stock.
